

Robert Emmett McDonough School of Business
Georgetown University
Assistant Professor Positions in Operations Management

Georgetown University's McDonough School of Business invites applications for two tenure-track faculty positions in Operations Management, within the Operations and Information Management (OPIM) Area. We seek to make appointments at the Assistant Professor level. Pending budget approval, the appointments would begin at the start of Fall 2020. Candidates should hold a Ph.D. from a business-related discipline, or expect to defend their dissertation by August 2020. We are seeking candidates with demonstrated ability for distinguished research in Operations Management and teaching excellence in Operations Management, Management Science and/or Business Statistics. Candidates with interests in the areas of sustainability, technology/innovation, and healthcare, and demonstrated knowledge in data analytics/science, empirical operations management, and/or behavioral operations management are particularly encouraged to apply.
